

WANTED TO SEE JEFF DAVIS.

A Noted Character Who Had "Never Laid Eyes on Him."

Col. Ogden gave me an amusing instance of the effects of this semi-omniscience on an untutored native of the southern swamps. Nick Ducheneville has a hunting lodge near the east end of Lake Pontchartrain, and is a noted character in this region. He is an expert on dogs, hunting, and fishing, and all accessories to these sports, and is a good-hearted fellow, who will, now then, or oftener, get on a howling spree, and is always grotesquely profane. Out on a gunning expedition with him three or four weeks ago, Col. Ogden happened to mention Jeff Davis. Nick said: "That air's a man I want to see. I want to see. I was in his war four years, an' I ain't never laid eyes on him yit. What kin' o' man is he, colonel?"

"Col. Ogden replied: "Nick, Mr. Davis is a great man, a very great man. There is nothing he doesn't know. Why, Nick, he knows more about medicine than any doctor you ever saw, and more about horses than any of your sporting men. He can tell you more about hunting and fishing than any of our hunters and fishermen. He can sail a boat or put on a fly better than either of us. Why, Nick, he knows more about boats and guns and dogs than both of us put together."

"Nick's eyes had been gradually swelling during this eulogium, and here he burst out with: 'By gum, colonel, he must be a great man! Know more about dogs than I do. Lord! what a whale he must be. I'd give a dollar jist to look at him; by gum!'"

"About a week later Mr. Davis was sitting in the office of one of the little lake-side hotels with a party of gentlemen who were out on a duck-shooting excursion. One of them had a handsome blue setter, and the confederate ex-chief was explaining how that particular strain of dogs originated in this country, stating, I think, that the ancestral canines were presented to John Jay when he was in Europe, about the first of this century, and entering into an elaborate disquisition on the various breeds of hunting dogs, their qualities and characteristics, the modes of training them, and their value for different purposes. Col. Ogden's friend Nick, pretty drunk, had entered the room during the talking, and, learning who this marvelous discourses on dogs was, had listened in open-eyed and open-mouthed amazement, and at last, swept away by his enthusiasm, rushed up to Mr. Davis, and, sticking out his huge, grimy hand, exclaimed. In tones that could be heard a quarter of a mile: "By gum, sir, Mr. Davis, I want to shake hands with you! I'll be damned if you ain't the greatest man I ever seed, sir! By gum, sir, a man that knows more about dogs than me and Col. Ogden is the greatest man in the world, sir! He's bigger than George Washington an' Napoleon Bonaparte, sir! Mr. Davis, I want you to come on to my place an' stay a week, an' it shant cost you a cent, sir, not a damned cent, sir! By gum, Mr. Davis, you're jist the man we want for governor, sir! A man that knows as much about dogs as you do could beat all hell, sir!"

"Nick, I understand, is still solid for Mr. Davis, first, last, and at all the time, for governor of Mississippi, Louisiana, or any other state into which his rough-diamond admirer's nomadic pursuits may take him."—Cor. New York Sun.

Minute Forms of Animal Life.

It was formerly thought that mites of cheese were the smallest forms of animal existence, but it is now considered that a mite is twenty-seven million times larger than some of the animalcule disclosed by the microscope, some of these discernible in certain water belong so small that a thousand million of individuals, each with a distinct life of its own, occupy no more room than a grain of sand; but their number is sometimes so great that they give to the water they live in a red or yellow tinge. In this connection it is estimated that the milt of a codfish contains more minute animals than the whole human population of the world.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Drew the Line at Snores.

The organ-blower in a London church recently fell asleep during the service, of which fact the audience soon became conscious by his vigorous blowing of his own organ. The Rev. Arthur Hall, the preacher, after bearing it for a while, stopped and remarked: "I do not object to a quiet nap on a hot day, and am flattered at being able to contribute to anybody's repose. But, while proud at being able to give the beloved sleep, I wish it to be distinctly understood that I draw the line at snores. There is a man snoring in the congregation, and I shall be obliged if somebody will waken him." The offender was quickly roused.—Chicago Tribune.

Gambetta's Chef de Cuisine.

M. Trompette, Gambetta's old cook, at present holds an appointment in the house of a wealthy financier. A couple of weeks ago this gentleman gave a large ball, and the friends of M. Trompette were considerably surprised when they found that the chef de cuisine on that eventful evening was playing domino at the Cafe de l'Opera. One friend took him to task. "For large masses it is quite impossible to turn out such fine delicacies as I invariably introduce into my daily menus. I leave this sort of work to my assistants." It may be added that M. Trompette's salary, with free board and lodging, amounts to $9,000 per annum.—Chicago Times.

The Fox-Hunting Season in England.

The fox-hunting season in England closes in a mournful strain of disappointment. Not only has the season been dull from a sporting point of view, but some of the staunchest supporters have felt that they could not afford to continue the sport. Farmers have been unusually determined to preserve their rights, and have warned hunters off the field by such evident signs as closed gates, wire fences and notices.—Chicago Tribune.

Frenchmen Would Learn with Pleasure.

Prince Bismarck recently wrote a French young lady, who inquired for his health, that he enjoyed fair health, but that he had no doubt hundreds of Frenchmen would learn with pleasure that rheumatism gave him many painful hours.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Getting Rid of Female Printers.

In a certain Australian town thirty female printers were introduced. The typographical society adopted a novel way of removing them. It took two or three years to do it, but it was accomplished at last, by the girls all becoming the wives of the printers.—Chicago Journal.

A Fisheries Commission for England.

The British government intends to organize a fisheries commission. There is now no scientific man employed on this subject in either Great Britain or Ireland.—New York Sun.

THE DAILY HERALD.

To-day, September 1st, 1886, is issued the first number of THE DAILY HERALD, a morning newspaper, to be printed for the proprietor under contract by the "Press Publishing Company," Merchant street, Honolulu.

Price Six Dollars per Annum or Fifty Cents per Month.

All who receive a copy of the initial or any succeeding number are respectfully

INVITED TO SUBSCRIBE.

Business men are solicited to test the advantages of THE DAILY HERALD as an ADVERTISING MEDIUM.

A large edition will be printed each day, to be circulated in Honolulu and throughout the Islands, regardless of subscriptions, until a regular paying list of subscribers is obtained on the public becoming acquainted with the merits of the paper.

The DAILY HERALD will furnish a fresh and readable record of events in city and country. It will also give, from time to time as received, a summary of the latest news from the outside world, in concise and systematic form.

The DAILY HERALD will follow a straightforward, consistent, independent and moderate course in the discussion of public affairs. It will not be the servile organ of any clique, faction or party. At the same time an earnest support will be given to measures promotive of the public welfare, and to individuals or organizations that may appear in the political field, with claims to popular confidence backed by worthy records and unassailable principles.

The undersigned would, however, rather point to his record as a journalist in this city for the past two years, as conductor of the Daily Bulletin, than make promises that, in general estimation, are valueless until justified by performance. He can only pledge himself to do his best to produce a thorough, an influential, and in every way acceptable, daily newspaper.

Try the "Daily Herald" for a month at least.
